Rabbi Michael Rascoe

People take the Book of Esther too seriously, though it deals with serious themes. If it's history, it's not accurate. How we choose to commemorate it fascinates: we celebrate, not dwelling on possible deadly consequences in some grave manner. We treat it as a joke: Haman becomes a clown; Ahasueros already is one. We masquerade, even as Haman, create a hat and a cookie based on him. He is one character about whom we write musicals and parodies, have parades, and make noise. We didn't worry about its' effects, its' toll on life, and why be a Jew. Instead, it's a joke.

Humor is the best way to get through life, and to survive as Jews. Some people, including some Jews, say that persecution keeps us alive. Without anti-Jewish outbreaks, we would have disappeared like everyone else. Pogroms happen routinely. Jews are killed; slaughtered. We don't exist due to them. We survive despite them. We could have given up long ago (genealogy sites now make it difficult). We didn't. Persecutions don't strengthen us; they test our strength, our resolve to live according to God's way. As the Psalmist says, "Death's bonds encompassed me; Sheol's torments overtook me. I came upon trouble and sorrow, and I invoked the Lord's name....All the nations have beset me;...they surround me...like bees. I shall not die but live and proclaim the works of the Lord" (Psalms 116:3, 118:10, 11, 12, 17, in Hallel; Psalms we say on joyous occasions).

We produced the Bible as free Jews living in our own land. Great commentators (Rashi) and poets (Yehudah Ha-Levi and Sh'lomo ibn Gabirol) wrote when times were better, not worse, and see today's great works. We survive by concentrating on life's enduring aspects: Shabbat and holidays' joy, and a tradition that finds happiness in study, knowing that despite it all we are part of a larger human family while we remain faithful to tradition, and to God. We nourish and sustain ourselves this way. With humor we accept what life throws at us, and don't give in or give up, despite it all. Humor puts things in perspective. Looking at the world and our condition with humor leads to the means to find the wellsprings of our tradition that sustain us and keep us dynamic, open to change and to grow. Despite it all, we keep a sense of humor, turning Haman into a laughingstock worthy of dressing up in costume, and into a hamentashen, a pastry, delightfully consumed in a mouthful. Antisemites try to destroy us. We're still here. With humor, we buttress lifestyle and tradition to remain true to ourselves and to God.

Some Passover Humor

My five-year-old daughter excitedly greeted her mother: "Guess what we made in Jewish school today, Mommy. We made unleaded bread!"

Q: What do you call someone who derives pleasure from the bread of affliction?

A: A matzochist.

What army base is off limits on Passover? Fort Leavenworth.

Why did Shlomo not do his homework on pesach? Because his teacher said it was a piece of cake.

What's the difference between matzoh and cardboard?? Cardboard doesn't leave crumbs on the floor.

Philanthropy • Public Service • Volunteering

We know what it takes to make a strong Jewish community.
Doing our job well is just the beginning.

We believe to be a good funeral director, you should serve the community in times of growth and happiness as well as times of grief. It's not surprising we've served the Jewish community for over 100 years. How we've served is the surprising part. David Rubin and his entire staff work tirelessly in serving the Jewish community, but then, that's part of our philosophy and tradition. We believe to be a good funeral director, you should serve and give back to the community.
